H. A. OELZE DIES SATURDAY MORNING

Prominent Citizen and Large
Real Estate Holder—Active in Church and Financial Circles.

FUNERAL HELD SUNDAY

H. A. Oelze died Saturday morning at an early hour at his home in this city, after a lengthy illness. Although his condition had been worse for several weeks, only himself, his family and physicians, realized that death was near. Mr. Oelze was one of the most prominent citizens of Cloverport. He was a man of deep interests, being a lover of his home, a faithful and active member of the church and a capable business man. His financial success was proof that opportunities are as great in the small town as in the city. He was a large holder in real estate. Mr. Oelze was director and stockholder in The Bank of Cloverport and also interested in the Cloverport Ice Company.

Mr. Oelze was born in Madgebury, Germany, November 15, 1848. He was the son of Henry and Kathrine Oelze, who came to this country when their first born, Amiel, was two years of age. Forty-one years ago Mr. Oelze came to Cloverport and in 1869 he married Miss Adrian Heston. He leaves his wife and their son, Robert Leonard Oelze, two sisters, Mrs. Nannie Jarboe, of Enid, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Harrison Thurman, and one brother, Powell Oelze, of Troy, Ind.

The funeral was held from the residence Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev. W. C. Frank and Rev. E. O. Cottrell officiated. Sincere and heartfelt tributes were paid to Mr. Oelze. The services were a great comfort to Mrs. Oelze, who was lying ill a bed, suffering from a dislocated knee, as a result of a fall Friday.

The interment took place in the Cloverport cemetery. Mr. Oelze loved flowers and very handsome ones covered his grave. The pall bearers were: S. P. Conrad, J. C. Nolte, W. G. Smart, F. P. Payne, C. W. Moorman, D. H. Severs. Many friends called at the home Saturday, leaving their cards and expressions of sympathy. Several came from a distance to attend the funeral.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our thanks for the kindness and sympathy expressed by our friends in our bereavement.

School Notes From

Superintendent Trent.

The County Graduation Examination was held Friday and Saturday, January 29 and 30. There were fifteen applicants at Hardinsburg, eleven at Webster and six at Stephensport. There were also four applicants from Hardinsburg colored school and two from Irvington colored school, making a grand total of thirty-eight.

The examiners are busy grading the papers and will mail out all reports as soon as they can finish the grading.

We are having numerous requests from teachers, throughout the county, for a list of questions. We did not have enough to supply even the applicants. The Breckenridge News regrets that it cannot print the questions.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kendall and family, Webster, Ky.

Bank Closed Voluntarily.

The Central City Deposit Bank was voluntarily closed Saturday by President E. E. Gregory. The cause of the suspension is attributed to dull mining business in the Central City district and steady withdrawals of savings deposits by families dependent upon the mines, as well as slow collections.

The bank is capitalized at $40,000 and has a surplus of $5,000. The deposits at the time of the closing amounted to about $100,000 of which $58,000 was on time certificates and $42,000 open deposits. The loans amount to $145,000 and rediscunts to $23,000.

Mr. Gregory is very confident that all creditors can be paid in full and, to assist in speedily doing this, volunteered to turn over his own property to the bank.

"OLD MAN'S DARLING" SUES

Bride Declares Income on $100,000
Cannot Maintain Her.

Atlanta (Special): Fulton county deputy sheriffs are trying to serve papers on Edward B. Alsop, a wealthy octogenarian of Pittsburg and Washington, in a suit for separation begun by his twenty-two-year-old wife, Elsie Pope Hill Alsop, formerly of Washington, Ga.

The service of the papers outside of New York is made legal by a special order of John W. Goff of the New York supreme court.

Mrs. Alsop declares that at the time of their marriage her husband gave her only $100,000 worth of Pennsylvania bonds, which yielded 5 per cent, but are not marketable and are of uncertain value.

The interest on the $100,000 in bonds is "entirely insufficient," Mrs. Alsop says, "to maintain her in the manner to which she became accustomed while living with her husband."

NAVAL PROGRAM IS UPSET

A Reduction of Seven Ships of War
Forced by Underwood.

Washington (Special): A savage attack on the naval bill in the house was made by Representative Underwood, and resulted in the destruction in part of the well-balanced plan for additions to the navy proposed by the house committee on naval affairs.

When the bill was reported to the house it contained authorization for construction of twenty-eight ships of war. When the bill went to the senate it provided for only twenty-one additions to the fleet. The measure was robbed of six submarines, one hospital ship and one transport, auxiliaries of a type that navy officers have testified are badly needed by the American navy.

daughter, Mrs. Joseph Ball-man—Member of St. Rose.

Mrs. Wheatley was the mother of six children, but is survived by only one, Thos. Wheatley, of Hancock county; also by two grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. She was a member of the Catholic church, and her body was laid to rest in St. Rose cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Father Henry.

Their New Home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cook's new home at Irvington is nearing completion. It is beautiful and comfortable home, and has all the conveniences, water, light and heat. The builders were Wilson & Bryant, of McQuady, and their work speaks for itself. Mr. and Mrs. Cook are to be congratulated.

THE GIRL WHO WANTED TO MARRY A FARMER

Illustrations Show the Exhibit of the INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY at the SAN FRANCISCO EXPOSITION

"Oh, dear! I wish I could marry a farmer," sighed Betty Barrows. "And live on a farm?" asked Mary Lee Watkins, who had just driven in town from the country to spend the day with Betty and attend her theater party that afternoon. Mary Lee's cheeks were aglow with coloring from the fresh country air. "No farm life for me, I see too much of it every day. If I marry a farmer, he will get a job in the city," she continued.

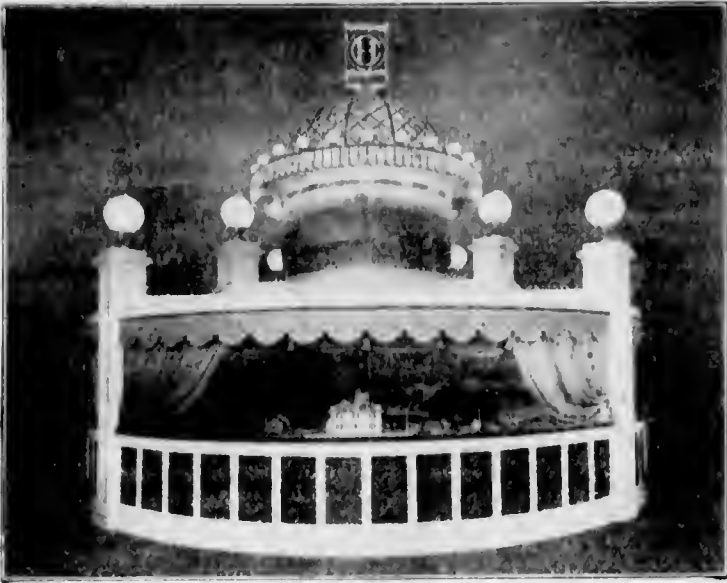

"Leave a good living and all the op-

Surely she did not know how awful it is to have a nice, clean room and about eight men come in with mud so thick on their shoes that there is enough to scatter all over the room. But men who use these many different machines on their farms do not bring in mud. For instance when Betty's Uncle Jimmy got that International motor truck he was compelled to improve the roads around his farm before he could use it. This got all his neighbors to improving their roads. So the mud around Uncle Jimmy's place was not so plentiful after he caught the Harvester spirit.

Mary Lee did not see much of the show that afternoon. She was thinking of that picture of the Model Farm. She was wondering if that little cabin of John's could be made into a modern farm house someday! She thought and wondered and dreamed.

Late that evening John Woodruff drove in town for Mary Lee. They had to hurry home and Betty did not get to say anything more to her dearest friend about farm life.

They were almost home and John had portunities the farm affords today?" inquired Betty, as she looked up with serious eyes from her needle work. She never lost a minute—even the time spent waiting for a meal, a guest or the appointed time for an engagement, she spent in employment. In this way Betty made all her lingerie by hand.

"I live on a farm—I know what it means. When the men do not get in from the fields in time, then the women have to milk the cows and do lots of hard work outside," asserted the country girl.

"You can get a milking machine now," returned Betty. Just the other day she had seen the pictures of the International Harvester Company's Miniature Model Farm exhibit which will be given at the San Francisco exposition. This exhibit shows the I. H. C. cream separator and the churn. Betty also told Mary Lee about the I. H. C. washing machine and other utensils required in a modern laundry, thus solving one of the hardships of the farm woman. Home conveniences, electric lights, asked the same old question again. Mary Lee did not hesitate—there was no silence, no anxious moments for John for she said as though she had the words ready and waiting to speak: "John, you know I have always wanted to marry a farmer—always wanted to marry a farmer—but never did I want to live on a farm until now—"

A bridal trip to San Francisco was planned at once. Mary Lee wanted to see that exhibit of the International Harvester Company and John was anxious for her to see it. Great it is to have a friend who really understands you, who will help you push away false illusions that will keep you from getting the big things you want, who will help you overcome little faults that might keep you out of Heaven. At the wedding Miss Betty Barrows was maid-of-honor. She was chosen because it was her picture that made Mary Lee see that love could turn a cabin into a mansion—the mansion was years and years away. John is just a poor farm boy—but he has water systems and power plants have changed the life of the farmer and his family.

"But machines cost loads and loads of money," continued Mary Lee.

"Yes, all machinery costs money," Betty philosophized. "You can buy it on credit and soon pay for it. Buy one small machine at a time. Pay for it, then save up enough money to buy another. The more of these wonderful International Harvester machines a farmer has, the less heavy work has he and especially does he need them in short seasons."

Betty made farm life sound ideal.

RUSSIANS MAKE FURTHER GAINS

Heavy Guns Save Germans at Bzura Line.

ACTIVITY IS BEING LESSENER

Believed Germans Are Preparing to Make a Hard Drive Against French Line Near Soissons—Only Minor Engagements Engage Troops.

Paris (Special): Diminished activity the past two days in western Europe has been unusual, but have been marked by two significant operations. The Germans opened fire with their heavy guns upon the French line north of Soissons, in the section where the Germans in the middle of last month scored their only important successes since they took root in northern France. The bombardment of the French line suggests that the invaders are preparing to make another onslaught similar to their drive which bent the French line back about eighty hundred yards January 15. It is not considered likely however, that attacks in this quarter can produce material advantage for the Kaiser's troops.

The only other infantry movement was an attack by the Germans in the bitterly contested region of Neaulm in the Champagne district. The attack was repulsed. Elsewhere, from Arras to Rheims and from Argonne to the Vosges there were artillery combats but no infantry fighting.

The other operation of interest marking a period of lessened activity was the victory won by British troops between La Bassée and Bethune. For many weeks the Germans maintained themselves in a brick yard which which dominated a road between the Germans here at La Bassée, and the French base at Bethune. A detachment of British troops stormed and captured the German position and drove them to a second line. Probably the most violent attacks delivered by the Germans in northern France have been against the British troops. Each side has given way only to swing back to its original position.

London, Feb. 8.—Petrograd reports news from Warsaw that the Germans west of the Bzura and the Rakva are withdrawing to position occupied west of Lodz, in the early part of December, and that the retirement is the first stage of a general retreat from Poland.

The latest news of the situation on the short thirty miles west of Warsaw, is confirmatory of the announcements of breaches in the German line. According to dispatches from Petrograd, the Russians have made further advances along the Bzura in the movement designed to turn the German left flank, and have crumpled the German center by fierce attacks on the Rakva, south of the Bzura line. It is reported that the Germans were saved from complete rout only because of the immense numbers of heavy guns they had in support of their infantry.

Recognized Advantages.

You will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has recognized advantages over most medicines in use for coughs and colds. It does not suppress a cough but loosens and relieves it. It aids expectoration and opens the secretions, which enables the system to throw off a cold. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia. It contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by all dealers.

STOCK YARDS ARE CLOSED

Indianapolis, Chicago and Other Points Hit by Government Decree.

Indianapolis (Special): As the result of the discovery of foot and mouth infection in Chicago, Indianapolis, Louisville, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Jersey City, Pittsburgh and Columbus, the department of agriculture has instructed its inspectors to close yards in those cities to interstate shipment of live stock after shipment in transit had been disposed of.

An order prescribing details and declaring whether the yards will be permitted to continue to receive cattle for immediate slaughter will be issued later. As to shipments in transit, the inspectors were instructed to allow the live stock to go forward if they showed no symptoms of the disease, had not been handled in infected pens and were destined for immediate slaughter in quarantined areas where federal inspection of meats is maintained.

BANK MUST MAKE UP LOSS

Comptroller Holds Directors Responsible For Stock Loss.

Washington (Special): John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency, has called upon the directors of the National Bank of Commerce, New York city, personally to make good certain losses sustained by the bank through stock transactions. The directors of the bank, or at least a part of them, have yielded to the comptroller's demand.

What the amount involved was could not be ascertained here, but Washington was not so much interested in that as in the policy which this action seems to indicate on the part of the comptroller's office.

The losses which the Bank of Commerce were called on to make good resulted from transactions or investment which Comptroller Williams contended were without authority in law. They did not constitute violations of the law, but there was nothing in the national banking act which authorized them.

STATE POLITICS

THE GOVERNOR'S RACE

"Jack Jones" in The Hart County Herald.

The whole face of the earth is covered with candidates for Governor.

No living man ever saw them in such large number and of such small caliber.

Henry Bosworth was elected Treasurer of Kentucky because he, as Sheriff of Fayette county, arrested Caleb Powers as he was fleeing from Kentucky after the assassination of William Goebel. Then, after that, he was elected Auditor for the State of Kentucky simply because he arrested Powers. Now he wants to be elected Governor of Kentucky because he arrested Powers.

Mr. Bosworth has demonstrated that he had sufficient ability to take an armed posse and go into a railroad train at Lexington and arrest Caleb Powers, who was a passenger on the train. Again, as Treasurer of Kentucky, he has proven that when a warrant, say for a hundred dollars, was presented at the Treasurer's window for payment, he could accurately count out a hundred dollars in payment of the warrant.

He is now Auditor of Kentucky, but he has not yet shown that he is the best man in all Kentucky for the place.

Besides, he is a part—a big part—of the present State Administration; and that fact soon will be—and ought to be—fatal to any man's political aspirations in Kentucky, from now until kingdom come.

Mr. Bosworth should not ask the democrats of Kentucky to keep on electing him to office forever because he arrested Caleb Powers once. Before he is made Governor he should, at least, arrest him some more. The Governor of Kentucky should be something more—much more—than a good arresting officer.

As Governor he would have no arrests to make. Therefore, his qualifications—or lack of qualifications—should be considered.

Our own town Marshal is a good arresting officer; but he is not a candidate for Governor of Kentucky. Neither should Henry Bosworth be.

Then, there's Mr. John W. Newman, who is now Commissioner of Agriculture for Kentucky. He, too, wants to be Governor of Kentucky.

As Commissioner of Agriculture he has been principally engaged in running the Kentucky State Fair down at Louisville. Yes, he has been running the State Fair, up or down—for better or for worse. But, since the Fair is over he has been running the quarantine against the "foot and mouth disease," which either has or has not existed—this question being yet not settled.

Mr. Newman co-operated with Federal agents who were sent to Kentucky to stamp out the disease. They stamped it out by preventing the farmers from shipping their healthy stock to market. This quarantine against the "foot and mouth disease"—which may or may not have existed—has cost the farmers millions of dollars.

Besides, "Mr. Foot-and-mouth-disease Newman" is a part, and a big part of the present State Administration; and that fact is enough to, and ought to, forever politically damn any man in Kentucky.

Then, there's Lieutenant-Governor McDermott. He, too, wants to be Governor of Kentucky.

In an article which appeared in the Louisville Evening Times on January the second, 1915, it is said of Mr. McDermott:

"In 1911 he was urged by the State Democratic Leaders to become a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. After declining because of the certain injury to his law business, he consented to run though only six weeks remained before the primary."

May we, just here, be permitted to ask what "leaders," instead of the people, had him become a candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky? May we also be allowed to inquire what Irons these self-same "leaders" had in the fire?

And, if we may further be indulged in our questioning, we will ask why Mr. McDermott was not asked by those aforementioned "leaders" to become a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Kentucky until just a few weeks before the primary election, which primary election had just been postponed from May to July by those same leaders?

In the above referred to Louisville Times newspaper article, it is further said of Mr. McDermott:

"He was selected to speak at the Silver Jubilee of Bishop William G. McCloskey and Bishop Dudley of the Episcopal church, and was the speaker at the testimonial dinner given to the Reverend W. H. Whittitt, and the Reverend Carter Jones of the Baptist church, and of the Reverend E. L. Boyle of the Christian church, and at a meeting of the Reverend U. G. Foote of the Methodist church."

Further inquisitiveness again seizes us and we would politely ask, if you please, why, in the same newspaper article reference is made not only to the fact that certain "leaders" just before the primary election prevailed upon him to run, but also refers to the fact that he had made speeches upon occasion of jubilees and anniversaries and such functions given or held in honor of preachers—preachers Catholic, preachers Episcopalian, preachers Baptist, preachers Christian and preachers Methodist?

Pray tell us, is there any connection between the "leaders" getting him into the race just before the primary election and this reference of having made speeches Catholic, speeches Episcopalian, speeches Baptist, speeches Christian and speeches Methodist?

Besides, Mr. McDermott is a part—and a big part at that—of the present State Administration; and that would and should, politically and forever damn him in Kentucky. Not the people but the "leaders"—the very practically leaders at that—foisted Mr. McDermott as Lieutenant-Governor and as President of the Kentucky State Senate upon the people. The State Senate was one-half of the State Legislature which these "leaders" controlled, and, by that control, made it possible for Kentucky now to be head over heels in debt. Of course this could not have been done except

A DANGEROUS MISTAKE

Cloverport Mothers Should Not Neglect Kidney Weakness in Children.

Many children have weak kidneys. An early warning is bed-wetting. Often followed by backache, headache, languor.

'Tis a mistake to neglect these troubles.

To blame the child for its own distress.

Seek to check the cause.

Save the child from dangerous kidney ills.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for weak kidneys.

Thousands of parents know their worth.

Read this testimony.

Mrs. C. H. Elder, Taylor St., Cannelton, Ind., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills in my child's case and it took only a short time before they helped her. The child had weak kidneys nearly all her life and there seemed to be difficulty with the kidney secretions day and night, which greatly interfered with her school work. She was very nervous and was cross and irritable. Doan's Kidney Pills checked the trouble and I believe that continued use will make a complete cure. It gives me pleasure to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to mothers having children afflicted with weak kidneys."

this same crowd of "leaders" just referred to cast old Grandma McGreary into "twilight sleep," and while so soothingly disarmed, he signed bills and made appointments which the taxpayers of Kentucky will not forget in a hundred years.

This Administration, of which Mr. McDermott is such a potent part, is the same State Administration which will go down to history and Hades in unnumbered automobiles, looking for stray hooks which took French leave from the State Library while the "foot and mouth disease" did or did not prevail in Kentucky.

No man, no matter what his name, should be nominated by the Democrats of Kentucky if he constitute a real part of the present State Administration.

Effect of Great Kidney Remedy is Soon Realized.

I feel it my duty to let you know what Swamp-Root did for me. I was bothered with my back for over twenty years and at times I could hardly get out of bed. I read your advertisement and decided to try Swamp-Root. Used five bottles, and it has been five years since I used it, and I have never been bothered a day since I took the last bottle of it. I am thoroughly convinced that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root cured me and would recommend it to others suffering as I did.

My husband was troubled with kidney and bladder troubles and he took your Swamp-Root and it cured him. This was about five years ago.

SPEAKING TO VOTERS.

The candidates of today have awakened to the fact that reaching the voters through the country weekly is the quickest, easiest and most efficient way. Through the country weekly the office-seekers may pick their prospects. If they need to speak to those in Breckenridge county or in Bell county, they can employ the advertising columns of the leading newspapers in that territory. The candidate sees what a big opportunity he has to get in touch with those whom he wants to convert to his side of the question. They see how many more people he can talk to through the country weekly than in a court-house. Usually the men who go to hear a candidate speak are the men who are already for him. No one else hears him. But through advertising in the important country paper, the candidate gets to talk directly to the man, who probably is not interested enough to go hear him speak at the county seat. He will for curiosity or passing interest sit at home and read what all the candidates are saying.

While newspaper advertising costs money, it is not so expensive as traveling from place to place; not so hard on a man physically. And, best of all, the candidate may reach the voters without neglecting the duties of his office, which is, no doubt, frequently done while he goes out campaigning.

EVERY DAY BUNDLE DAY.

Bundle Day in New York the Mayor asked for a million packages of clothing to clothe the poor of that city. The plan met with success because the men considered it an honor to carry a bundle for charity on last Thursday. Why not make every day a bundle day in your community? There once lived in Cloverport a woman who was never seen without a bundle. Going from her home she always carried a package to some one else. Today she directs large bundles to be sent to a charitable institution from which she receives a liberative salary as purchasing agent. If we would gather up only the fragments from our tables, we could observe Bundle Day. If we kept our attics clean, our cellars straight, our stores orderly, we could carry a bundle every day and never miss its contents. Sometimes, the things that are most useless and a cure, are kept for years. Learn to let go of these, some one would enjoy them. Hand them on, whatever they are, unsaleable articles in your stores, unused office equipment and unopened books of any value. The housekeeper may give away discarded clothing, unused household utensils, stacked away china, rugs for rugs, pieces for quilts and many little things that will never be used until seven years! Then you may not need them, you may have something far better. This is life to keep things going, and life is interesting as long as we do not let things ruin and rot and die around us.

THE CASE LAWYER.

He who stops, Friday, February 12, will recall that the date is significant in the history of our State and Nation, for, the day is the birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln. We want to join wholeheartedly in honoring the memory of this great man. His ruling gift was common sense. As a lawyer, Lincoln's good judgment and practical view-point brought him success. We read of him recently an interesting paragraph as follows:

"They used to say in terms of depreciation that Abraham Lincoln was only a 'case lawyer.' In this his critics were right, for Lincoln had no deep or broad knowledge of the law. But he won most of his cases. When he got a difficult case he probably knew very little about the actual rulings of the law involved. But he had good judgment—wonderful common sense. He read up all the law that applied to that case and went into court and won against lawyers who were graduates of the schools and far more learned in the law than he."

If the business man, like Lincoln, would adopt the Case System, devote his energies to overcoming one difficulty, it would be easier for him than trying to lift all his burdens at once. The best way to attain success is to take one step at a time.

The Henderson Route is certainly treating people mighty nice on the Branch during the session of Circuit Court. They are allowing passengers to use the early morning freight train out of Irvington. Many of the jurymen are taking advantage of this. They can serve on the jury and make their homes at night, do up their chores and get back in time for court every morning. The farmers in this county have no better friends or more accommodating than the officers of the Henderson Route. They never miss an opportunity to favor them when it is possible for them to do so.

There is a strong sentiment in this county, openly expressed, for H. H. Cherry for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He has a host of friends among the younger set of Democrats.

If some one were to send you a valentine, how would you like a year's subscription to The Breckenridge News? It is always full of pleasant reading and newsy items.

Mr. Hall's paper on poultry feeding shows a chicken must be properly fed to be good enough for food.

You can pretty well tell a man's heart by the way he pays his bills.

Two things worth working for are health and Heaven.

Poultry Feeds and Feeding

By Herbert Hall.

At the Farmers' Institute in Hardinsburg, Herbert Hall, successful in the poultry industry in Breckenridge county, read a paper written from experience on "Feeds and Feeding." Several valuable paragraphs from Mr. Hall's article are herewith published:

This is a subject that has occupied the minds of all feeders of live stock for a time past. The different food articles and their comparative values are not thoroughly understood by the majority of the novices in the live stock and poultry industry. In this article it is my desire to bring to bear on the minds of the farmers and poultry raisers the necessity of having an understanding of foods and how they should be compounded and the part of any food value that is wasted by not giving this subject the proper study.

Corn Fine at Proper Time.

Corn is a very fine feed in the proper time and in hands that know the results of corn in the different times of the year. Corn is rich in carbohydrates the property that cause oxidation or burning away of the worn out cells; therefore, if corn is fed to an excess in summer it will cause too much fat and will produce an excess of heat and in connection with the external heat of season may result in apoplexy of the brain. Corn is an excellent winter food and should be fed at night just before the birds go on the roost. When a hen fills her craw with corn on a cold winter night she practically has a little stove within herself to keep her warm, as the corn contains the heat-producing qualities. This is the same principal as a person eating meat in winter. You can rest assured that if you will feed corn at night that their combs will not freeze it matters not how poorly you have them housed; also the laying hen will feel more vigorous the next morning.

o o o

Wheat and oats are both excellent foods. They do not contain so much heat-producing material as corn, but have a greater per cent. of muscle, bone and egg material in them.

o o o

Beef scraps contains two times as much protein as carbohydrates; therefore, it should be fed in connection with the grain and mash feed. You may ask: Why do this? From the simple fact, you supply the needs of the body in this element and the hen can then convert the food she consumes into eggs without robbing her body of any necessary material for its nourishment.

o o o

Granulated bone is very fine for growing birds, as it also contains a large percent. of bone and muscle material.

Green Feed Important.

Green feed is indispensable to a poultry raiser. It is not much trouble to get eggs and to have them fertile in the natural season, and to do so in winter—the unnatural season—you must make their feed like summer and to do so they must be well supplied with green feed. Green feed has a medical value and has a hygienic effect upon the hen. The simplest and probably the most convenient way for the most of you to have this green feed is: Just as soon as your garden truck will do to remove, do so, and sow your garden in rye, though if you have another lot convenient to your poultry yard, sow it. But this plan has its objections. For instance, in winter when eggs are 30 cents per dozen, there comes a big snow and lays on for eight or ten days, your egg supply is going to fall short, and in the spring, when you want fertile eggs and lots of them, you will want to plow the lots to make ready for a crop. But if you will provide yourself with an expensive oat sprouter, as I have here, you can have green feed when you want it and in any quantities.

Water Essential.

Water should be considered as an essential food, as it contains a great deal of mineral matter that the fowl's body needs and pure clean water and plenty of it is inductive to the perfect health of the fowl. An egg contains from 65 to 80 per cent. water; therefore, plenty of pure water will aid in production of more eggs and if it is given to the warm in the winter time you will be amply repaid for your trouble, with the increased number of eggs.

Table scraps also make a very fine feed if fed properly. They should not be poured on the ground in a sloppy state and then let the birds pick from them, but as they are gathered up in the kitchen, pour them up in some kind of a vessel and put in the potato and turnip peels, the cabbage trimmings and then cook them all well done and then add sufficient wheat bran to make the mixture crumbly and give them only what they will clean up in a few minutes.

Splendid Feeding Method.

A good method of feeding layers and breeders early in the morning as soon as the fowls come off the roost. They should be fed about one handful of commercial scratch feed to every two hens, or about one pint to every ten hens. About ten o'clock scatter from one to two square inches of sprouted oats, per hen, in the litter to induce more exercise, and in the winter time, along about three or four o'clock, feed them about as much of equal parts of corn, wheat and oats as fed of the scratch feed in the forenoon. Some recommend not to feed a scratch feed of a morning, but to give sufficient of the evening feed that they will not get it all before night and will have some still in the litter to work after in the morning. Always keep your hens well supplied with water, charcoal, grit and oyster shells.

I have endeavored in this article to give you an idea of feed, their values, and what I considered a good method of feeding, and if you will compile you a table of the several feeds and their food values and study which and how much of the different feed to put together to obtain a balanced ration it will be of much service to you. You can obtain this table of food values from most any poultry journal, but if you haven't this handy, I would be glad to supply you with a complete table with instructions how to find the ratios of the foods.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Judge Layman Wins

Merit on His Efficiency.

There was a large attendance at court last week and much political gossip was heard. Judge Reed, of Paducah, who is recognized as one of the ablest judges in Kentucky, was here as special judge in the Cox case, Judge Layman having prosecuted the case and being disqualified.

He was present in court while Judge Layman was trying some cases, and paid a high compliment as to the manner in which the court was conducted. Judge Layman made known to those who were inquiring as to the announcement of his candidacy for re-election as Circuit Judge, that he will formally announce within the next few weeks. From the numerous expressions heard, there seems to be a very strong sentiment among the people of the county that the record he has made, and the course he has pursued during the two years he has held the office of Circuit Judge merits their hearty endorsement. —Meade County Messenger.

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR

Copenhagen correspondents in Constantinople reported that the Anglo-French fleet has destroyed four of the Dardanelles forts. The dispatches continue that the defeat of the Turkish armies in the Caucasus and in Persia are only now becoming known in the Turkish capital, and that the news is causing a panic there.

Petrograd hears that the Russian victory commemorated by the repulse of 100,000 of Van Macken's veterans, was due in part to a ruse employed by the Russian commander-in-chief. Suspecting that the general situation would arouse the Germans along the Bzura and the Raska to a supreme effort, the Russian commander made a feint of detaching an army corps from the first and second lines defending the Bzura and the Raska. The troops were spectacularly paraded and entrained toward the Vistula. Undoubtedly the movement was observed, as it was meant to be, by the Germans, and Von Macken ordered an attack at daylight. The Russian regiments that had been detached were returned under cover of darkness, and taken to their original positions. In addition, at least thirty thousand fresh troops that had been held in reserve, were deployed on the second line.

When the German legions advanced in solid masses to attack in the early morning of the second they found a reinforced Russian army waiting them instead of a depleted army. Their mistake was apparent to them, no doubt, in the first two or three hours of conflict, but they persevered with magnificent courage until their columns were fairly shattered by the concentrated fire of the Russian artillery and machine guns.

FOODSTUFFS FOR GERMANY

New Decree Makes Importations Liable For Seizure.

London (Special): The following announcement was made by the foreign office: "The new German decree makes it evident that all grain and flour is to pass under control of the German government. It must, therefore, when imported, be regarded as virtually consigned to the German government or the authorities under their control."

"This creates a novel situation, and it is probable that if the destination and cargo of the Wilhelmina are for Germany, as supposed, the cargo will, if the vessel is intercepted, be submitted to a prize court in order that the new situation created by the German decree may be examined. There is no question of taking any proceedings against the vessel."

OREGON'S WOMAN SENATOR

Extended Greetings Await Miss Clark as She Takes Seat.

Salem, Ore. (Special): Miss Kathryn Clark, first woman senator in Oregon, has taken her seat in the state senate. Stunningly gowned and flushed with victory, she called at the statehouse before proceeding to the senate. She sought Miss Marion Towne, Oregon's first and only woman state representative, in the house. Representative Towne escorted Senator Clark to the senate chamber, where her appearance momentarily stopped the wheels of legislation. Doorkeepers, pages and officials crowded around to extend greetings.

Half a dozen senators jumped to their feet to move that the courtesies of the senate be extended immediately to Senator Clark.

THE POULTRYMAN.

The man who has a good laying strain of pure bred poultry is going to get enough eggs this winter to pay his feed and labor bills and net him a nice profit.

Pure bred poultry cannot be purchased at the price of barnyard fowls.

Don't keep a lot of drones or deadbeats or a lot of old hens that have outlived their usefulness.

The hens that are laying these days are the hens that more than pay for their board, and they ought to have an extra good feed occasionally.

Do not keep many breeds. It is a mistake to try to breed more than one type at a time.

Close culling is the only means of keeping the flock up to a high standard.

THE PREVENTION OF POULTRY TROUBLES

The great points to be emphasized in raising poultry are cleanliness, sunlight, fresh air and good food. Where these are insisted upon difficulties in raising poultry so far as disease is concerned are reduced to a minimum. It is rarely necessary to use any remedies where they are maintained.

People who do not supply such conditions seek to avoid difficulties by other kinds of preventive measures. Among the best of these is permanganate of potash. This is a chemical which destroys certain kinds of poisons and kills bacteria with which it comes in contact. The most convenient way in which to handle it is to dissolve 10 cents' worth in a pint of water and keep the solution tightly corked in a bottle, preferably kept in a dark closet. A tablespoonful of this solution to a gallon of water makes a sufficiently strong mixture for the fowls to drink without danger to themselves. Even if twice as much is used no damage need be looked for.

This solution has been recommended by the Maryland Agricultural col logic us having special value in the raising of chicks, since its action destroys bacteria which cause white diarrhea and other bowel troubles. If desired the crystals of the chemical may be dropped in the drinking water without having been previously dissolved, as suggested above. This, however, is not so good a plan because some of the crystals may not dissolve, and some parts of the solution may thus be weaker than others. Where it is thought desirable to follow this latter plan a safe guide is to use no more crystals to each gallon of water than will pile up on a ten cent piece.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Wiles of a Woman.

After the affair of the auto bandits—three of whom were killed—a lull followed. If you're a sailor you know what kind of a lull I mean—blue-black clouds down the southwest horizon, the water crinkly, the booms wabbling. Suddenly a series of "accidents" began to happen to Norton. At first he did not give the matter much thought. The safe which fell almost at his feet and crashed through the sidewalk merely induced him to believe he was lucky. At another time an automobile came furiously around a corner while he was crossing the street, and only amazing agility saved him from bodily hurt. The car was out of sight when he thought to recall the number.

Then came the jolt in the subway. Only a desperate grab by one of the guards saved him from being crushed to death. Even then he thought nothing. But when a new box of cigarettes arrived and he tried one and found it strangely perfumed, and, upon further analysis, found it to contain a Japanese narcotic, a slow but sure death, he became wide awake enough. They were after him. He began to walk carefully, to keep in public places as often as he possibly could.

He was not really afraid of death, but he did abhor the thought of its coming up from behind. Except for the cigarettes they were all "accidents," he could not have proved anything before a jury of his intimate friends.

He never entered an elevator without scrupulous care. He never passed under coverings over the sidewalks where construction was going on. Still, careful as he was, death confronted him once more. It was his habit to have his coffee and rolls—he rarely ate anything more for his breakfast—set down outside his door every morning. The coffee, being in a silver thermos bottle, kept its heat for Norton put his arms around her. When he took the stopper out and poured forth a cup it looked oddly black, discolored. It is quite probable that had there been no series of "accidents" he would have drunk a cup—and died in mortal agony. It contained bichloride of mercury.

Very quietly he set about to make inquiry. This was really becoming serious. In the kitchens downstairs nothing could be learned. The maid had set the thermos bottle before the door at 10:30. Norton had opened the door at 1:30—three hours after. The outlook was not the cheeriest. He knew perfectly well why all these things "happened," he had interfered with the plans of the scoundrels who were making every possible move to kidnap Florence Hargreave.

One afternoon he told Florence a visit. Of course he told her nothing. They had become secretly engaged the day after he had rescued her from the auto bandits. They were secretly engaged because Florence wanted it so. For once Jones suspected nothing. Why should he? He had troubles enough. As a matter of fact, Norton was afraid of him in the same sense as a boy is afraid of a policeman.

But on this day, when the time came, he accosted the butler and drew him into the pantry.

"Jones, they are after me now."

"You? Explain."

Norton briefly recounted the deliberate attempts against his life.

"You see, I'm not far enough to say that I'm not worried. I am, devilishly worried. I'm not worth any ransom. I'm in the way, and they seem determined to put me out of it."

"To any other man I would say travel. But to you I say when you leave your rooms don't go where you first thought you would—that is, some usual haunt. They'll be everywhere, near your restaurants, your clubs, your office. You're a methodical young man; become erratic. Keep away from here for at least three days, but always call me up by telephone some time during the day. Never under any circumstance, unless I send for you, come here at night. Only one man now watches the house during the day, but five are prowling around after dark. They might have instructions to shoot you on sight. I can't spare you just at present, Mr. Norton. You've been a godsend; and if it seems that sometimes I did not trust you fully it was because I did not care to drag you in too deep."

Deep? Norton thought of Florence and smiled inwardly. Could anybody be in deeper than he was? Once it was on the tip of his tongue to confess his love for Florence, but the gravity of Jones' countenance was an obstacle to such move; it did not invite it.

To be sure, Jones had no real authority to say what Florence should or should not do with her heart. Still, from all points of view, it was better to keep the affair under the rose till there came a more propitious hour in which to make the disclosure.

Love, in the midst of all these alarms! Sharp, desperate rogues on one side, millions on the other, and yet love could enter the scene so serenely, like an actor who had missed his cue and came on too soon.

Oddly enough, there was no real love-making such as you often read about. A pressure of the hand, a glance from the eye, there was seldom anything more. Only once—that memorable day on the river road—had he kissed her. No word of love had been spoken on either side. In that wild moment all conventionalities had disappeared like smoke in the wind. There had been neither past nor future, only the present in which they knew that they loved. With her he was happy, for he had no time to plan over the future. Away from her he saw the inevitable barriers providing against the marriage between a poor young man and a very rich young woman. A man who has any respect for himself wants always to be on equal terms with his wife. It's the way this peculiar organization called society has written down its rules. Doubtless a relic of the stone age, when Ab went out with his club to seek a wife and drag her by the hair to his den, there to care for her and to guard her with his life's blood. It is one of the few primitive sensations that remain to us, this wanting the female dependent upon the male. Perhaps this accounts for man's lack of interest on the suffragette question.

Only Susan suspected the true state of affairs, being a woman. Having had no real romance herself, she delighted in having a second-hand one, as you might say. She intercepted many a glance and pretended not to see the stolen hand pressures. The wedding was already full drawn in her mind's eye. These two young people should be married at Susan Farlow's when the roses were climbing up the sides of the house and the young robins were boldly trying their fuzzy wings. It struck her as rather strange, but she could not conjure up (at this wedding) more than two men besides the minister, the bridegroom, and the butler.

By forsaking his accustomed haunts under the advice of Jones, the hidden warfare ceased temporarily. You can't very well kill a man when you don't know where to find him. He ate his breakfasts haphazardly, now here now there. He received most of his assignments by telephone and wrote his stories and articles in his club, in the writing rooms of hotels, and in variously dispatched them to the office by messenger. The managing editor wanted to know what all this meant; but Norton declined to tell him.

It irked him to be forced to rearrange his daily life—his habits. It was a revolution against his ease, for he loved ease when he was not at work. He had the sensation of having been suddenly robbed of his home, of having been cast out into the streets and on top of all this he had to go and fall in love!

There was no longer a shadow upon the apartments of the Princess Perigoff. Braine came and went nightly without discovering any one. This rather worried him. It gave him the impression that the shadow had found out what he had been seeking and no longer needed to watch the coming and going of either himself or the Countess Perigoff.

"Olga, it looks as if we were at the end of our rope," he said discouragedly. "We have failed in all attempts so far. The devil watches over that girl."

"Or God," replied the countess gloomily. "In nearly every instance their success has been due to chance. Somehow I'm convinced that we are wrong. We should have let Hargreave escape quietly, followed him and made him fast when the right opportunity came. After a month or so his vigilance would have relaxed; he would have arrived at the belief that he had eluded us."

"Indeed!" ironically. "He wasn't vigilant all these years in which he did elude us. How about the child he never sought but guarded? Vigilance! He never was anything else all these seventeen years. The truth is, success has developed a coarseness in our methods. And now it is too late for finesse. We have tried every device we can think of; and there they are—the girl free, Norton unharmed, and the father as secure in his retreat as though he wore an invisible cloak. My head aches. I have ceased to be inventive."

"The two are in love with each other."

"Are you sure of that?"

"I have my eyes. But I begin to wonder."

"About what?"

"Whether or not Jones suspects me and is giving me rope to hang myself with. Not once have the police been called in and 'old what has really happened.' They're totally at sea. And what has become of the man over the way?"

"By the Lord Harry!" exclaimed Braine, clapping his hands. "I believe I've solved that. We shot a man coming out of Hargreave's. Since then there's been no one across the way. One and the same man!"

"That knowledge doesn't get us anywhere."

"No. You say they are in love?"

"Secretly. I don't believe the butler has an inkling of it. It is possible, however, that Susan has caught the trend of affairs. But, being rather romantic, she will in no wise interfere."

Braine smoked in silence. Presently a smile twisted his lips.

"You have thought of something?"

she asked.

"You might try it," he said. "They have accepted your friendship; whether with ulterior purpose remains to be learned. She has been to your apartments two or three times to tea and always got home safely."

"No," she said determinedly. "Nothing shall happen here. I will not take the risk."

"Wait till I'm through. Break up the romance in one way that the girl will bar Norton from the house. That's what we've been aiming at; to get rid of that meddling reporter. We've tried poison. Try your kind."

"What do you mean?"

"Lies."

"Ah! I understand. You want me to win him away from her. It cannot be done."

"Bah! You have a bag full of tricks. You can easily manage to put him into an equivocal position out of which he cannot possibly squirm so far as the girl is concerned. A little melodrama, arranged for the benefit of Florence. Fall into Norton's arms at the right moment, or something like that."

"I suppose I could. But if I failed

"You're too damnably clever to fall in your own particular work. Something has got to be done to keep those two apart. I've often thought of raiding the house boldly and carrying off the whole family, Susan and all. But a wholesale affair like that would be too noisy. Think it over, Olga; we have gone too far to back down now. There's always Russia; and while I'm the boss over here they never cease to watch me. They'll make me answer for a failure like this."

She eyed him speculatively. "You have money."

"O, the money doesn't matter. It's the game. It's the game of playing fast and loose with society, of pilfering with it with one hand and making it kow-tow with the other. It's the sport of the thing. What was your thought?"

"We could go away together, to South America."

"And tire of each other within a month," he retorted slyly. "No; we are in the same boat. We could not live but for this never ending excitement. And, more than that, we never could get far enough away from the long arm of the First Tea. We'll have to stick it out here. Can't you see?"

"Yes, I can see."

But in her heart she knew that she would have lived in a hut with this man till the end of her days. She abhorred the life, though she never, by the slightest word, let him become aware of it. There was always that abiding fear that at the first sign of weakness he would desert her. And she was wise in her deductions. Braine was loyal to her because she held his interest. Once that failed, he would be off and away.

The next afternoon the countess, having matured her plans against the happiness of the young girl who trusted her, drew up before the Hargreave place and alighted. Her welcome was the same as ever, and this strengthened her confidence.

The countess was always gesticulating. Her hands fluttered to emphasize her words. And the beautiful diamond solitaire caught the girl's eye. She seized the hand. Having an affair of her own, it was natural that she should be interested in that of her friend.

"I never saw that ring before."

"A gift of yesterday." The countess assumed a shy air which would have deceived St. Anthony. She twisted the ring on her finger.

"Tell me," cried Florence. "You are engaged?"

"Mercy, no!"

"Is he rich?"

"No. Money should not matter when your heart is involved."

As this thought was in accord with her own, Florence nodded her head sagely.

"It is nothing serious. Just a fancy. I shall never marry again. Men are gay deceivers; they always have been and always will be. Perhaps I'm a bit wicked; but I rather like to prove my theory that all men are weak. If I had a daughter I'd rather have her be an old man's darling than a young man's drudge. I distrust every man I know. I came to ask you and Susan to go to the opera with me tonight. You will come to my apartments first. You will come?"

"To be sure we will!"

"Simple little fool!" thought the Russian on the way home. "She shall see."

"I believe the countess is engaged to be married," said Florence to Jones.

"Indeed, miss?"

"Yes. I couldn't get anything definite out of her, but she had a beautiful ring on her finger. She wants Susan and me to go to the opera with her tonight. Will that be all right?"

Jones gazed abstractedly at the rug. Whenever a problem bothered him he seemed to find the solution in the delicate patterns of the Persian rugs. Finally he nodded. "I see no reason why you should not go. Only, watch out."

"Jones, there is one thing that will make me brave and happy. Will you tell me if you are in direct communication with my father?"

"Yes, Miss Florence," he answered promptly. "But do not breathe this to a single soul, neither Susan nor Norton."

"I promise that. But, ah! hasten the day when he can come to me without fear."

"That is my wish also."

"You need not call me miss. Why should you?"

"It might not be wise to have any one hear me call you thus familiarly," he objected gravely.

"Please yourself about that. Now I must telephone Jim."

"Jim?" the butler murmured.

He caught the word which was not intended for his ears. But for once Jones had been startled out of himself.

"Is it wrong for me to call Mr. Norton Jim?" she asked with a bit of banter.

"It is not considered quite the proper thing, Miss Florence, to call a young man by his first name unless you are engaged to marry him, or grew up with him from childhood."

"Well, supposing I were engaged to him?" haughtily.

"That would be a very grave affair. What have you to prove that he may not wish to marry you for your money?"

"Why, Jones, you know that I haven't a penny in the world I can call my own! There is nothing to prove, except your word, that I am Stanley Hargreave's daughter."

"No, there is nothing to prove that you are his daughter. But hasn't it ever occurred to you that there might be a purpose back of this? Might it not be of inestimable value that your father's enemies should be in doubt? Might it not be a means of holding them on the leash? There is proof, ample proof, my child; and when the time comes these will be shown you. But meantime put all thought of marrying Mr. Norton out of your mind."

"That I refuse to do," quietly. "I am at least mistress of my heart; and no one shall dictate to me whom I shall or shall not marry. I love Mr. Norton and he loves me, knowing that I may not be an heiress after all. And some day I shall marry him."

Jones bowed. This seemed to appear final to him, and nothing more was to be said.

Norton did not return to his rooms till seven. He found the telephone call and also a note in a handwriting unfamiliar. He tore off the envelope and found the contents to be from the Countess Perigoff.

"Call at eight tonight," he read. "I have an important news story for you. Tell no one, as I cannot be involved in the case. Cordially, Olga, Countess Perigoff."

Humph! Norton twiddled the note in his fingers and at length rolled it into a ball and threw it into the waste basket. He, too, made a mistake; he should have kept that note. He dressed, dined, and hurried off to the apartments of the countess.

He arrived ten minutes before Florence and Susan.

And Jones did some rapid telephoning.

"How long, how long!" the butler murmured. How long would this strange combat last? The strain was terrible. He slept but little during the nights, for his ears were always waiting for sounds. He had cast the chest into the sea, and it would take a dozen expert divers to locate it. And now, atop of all these worries, the child must fall in love with the first comer! It was heart-breaking. Norton, so far as he had learned, was cool and brave, honest and reliable in a pinch; but as the husband of Stanley Hargreave's daughter, that was altogether a different matter. And he must devise some means of putting a stop to it, but—

But he was saved that trouble.

Mongoose and cobra, that was the game being played; the cunning of the one against the deadly venom of the other. If he forced matters he would only lay himself open to the strike of the snake. He must have patience. Gradually they were breaking the organization, lopping off a branch here and there, but the peace of the future depended upon getting a grip on the spine of the cobra himself.

The trick was simple. The countess had news; trust her for that. She exhibited a cablegram, dated at Gibraltar, in which the British authorities stated definitely that no such person as William Oris, aviator, had arrived at Gibraltar. And then, as he rose, she rose also and gently precipitated herself into his arms, just at the moment Florence appeared in the doorway.

Very simple, indeed. When a woman falls toward a man there is nothing for him to do but extend his arms to prevent her from falling. Outwardly, however, to the eye which saw only the picture and comprehended not the cause, it had all the hallmarks of an affectionate embrace.

Florence stood perfectly still for a moment, then turned away.

"I beg your pardon," said the countess, "but a sudden fainting spell seized me. My heart is a bit weak."

"Don't mention it," replied the gallant Norton. He was as innocent as a babe as to what had really taken place.

Florence went back home. She wrote a brief note to Norton and inclosed the ring which she had secretly worn attached to a little chain around her neck.

When Norton came the next day she refused to see him. It was all over. She never wished to see him again.

"He says there has been some cruel mistake," said Jones.

"I saw him with the countess in his arms. I do not see any cruel mistake in that. I saw him. Tell him so. And add that I never wish to see him again."

Then she ran swiftly to her room, where she broke down and cried bitterly and would not be comforted by Susan.

"In heaven's name, what has happened?" demanded the frantic lover, "what has happened?"

The comedy of the whole affair lay in the fact that neither of the two suspected the countess, who consoled them both.

TWO CHRISTMAS COOKIES

In all good, old-fashioned German households the housewife is very busy for days baking her Christmas cakes. Does it seem to you rather early? No, indeed. It is high time that the Yuletide goodies were being packed in the huge earthenware crocks to stand in the cool storeroom to "mellow." They improve with age, just like fruit cake. Here are a few delicious cookies that are served at festive coffees during the holiday season:

CHOCOLATE KISSES.

One pound ground almonds, one-half pound pulverized sugar, one-half pound sweet chocolate (ground), stiffly beaten whites of eight eggs, juice of one-half lemon.

Stir the sugar into the beaten whites for ten minutes. Add the lemon juice, chocolate and almonds. Drop with a spoon on buttered tins and bake in a very cool oven until crisp to the touch.

HAZELNUT COOKIES.

One-half pound ground hazelnuts, one-half pound ground almonds, one pound pulverized sugar, whites of five eggs.

Beat the whites stiff. Add sugar and stir ten minutes. Take out one-half cupful of the mixture to be spread on the top of the cookies just before baking. Roll out the mixture one-quarter inch thick, cut into pretty shapes and bake in a cool oven until the pale fawn color appears.

Woman loves a clear, rosy complexion. Burdock Blood Bitters is splendid for purifying the blood, clearing the skin, restoring sound digestion. All druggists sell it. Price 61.

FAMOUS TREE THAT BLOOMS ON CHRISTMAS.

A very interesting group of Christmas superstitions clusters about plant and animal life. Tradition tells us that after Joseph of Arimathea had begged the body of our crucified Saviour and had laid it in his own newly hewn tomb he left Palestine forever. Staff in hand, he traveled many weary months and finally reached Glastonbury, in England. Here he planted his staff, and in the course of time it sent out leaves and buds. On the glad Christmas morning the buds burst into a mass of exquisite bloom. Since that day of long ago the Glastonbury thorn never fails to be covered with delicate white flowers on Christmas morning. By the following day they have all disappeared.

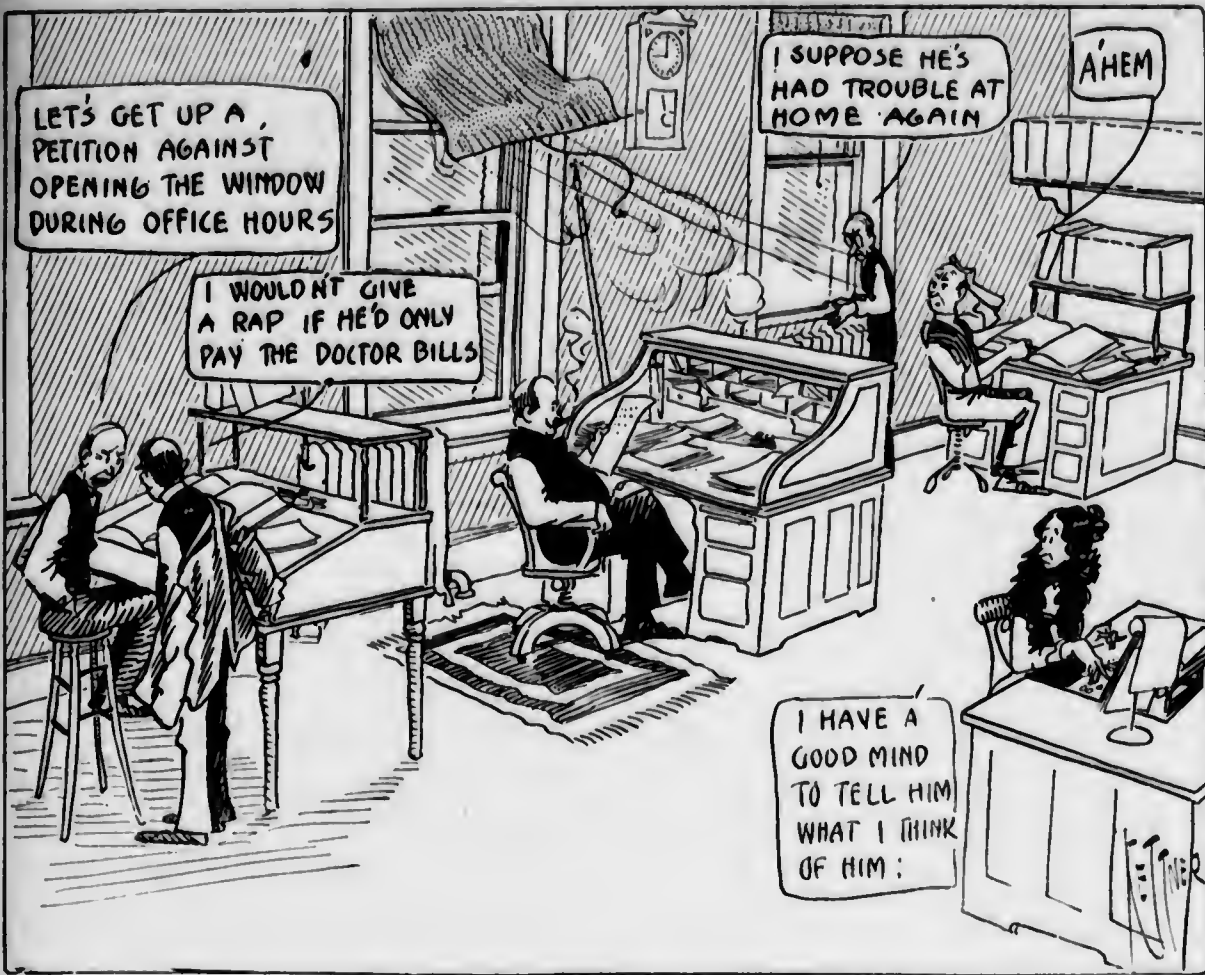

A cutting of the Glastonbury thorn was taken to Buckinghamshire, where it became as famous as the parent plant itself. Thousands of people from near and far were wont to go to see the blossoming of the thorn on Christmas morning. When about the middle of the eighteenth century England adopted the Gregorian calendar, which brought Christmas eleven days earlier than under the older style of reckoning time, the common people were greatly dissatisfied. To their simple minds they had actually been deprived of eleven days of their mortal life, and mobs marched through the streets carrying placards bearing the inscription, "Give Us Back Our Eleven Days!" That they had been wronged became a conviction when the Buckinghamshire thorn failed to blossom on the new date, and when the people actually refused to attend church on the 25th of December the clergy in that part of England were forced to celebrate divine worship on both the old and the new dates.

In pagan times special duties were supposed to preside over the harvests, and the people sought in every possible manner to propitiate these powerful gods. In out of the way parts of Europe the trees are still formally invited to the Christmas feast. Taking acceptance for granted, the remains of the Christmas dinner are spread about the roots of the fruit trees. This ceremony is supposed to insure plentiful harvests the following autumn. In other places the trees were in olden times beaten with clubs to make them more productive.

40c. and 50c. Eggs.

If your hens would only lay when eggs were high. Why shouldn't they? Some hens do. The hen that lays has a healthy pink tongue and gills. Those not laying are pale in the gills, their tongue or palate has a whitish look. What's the matter? What's the matter with you when your tongue is white? Bilious? That's just what ails the hen. Start her liver and see her get busy. B. A. Thomas Poultry Powder is guaranteed to start her liver and to start the eggs. For sale by Wedding's drug store, Cloverport, Ky.

THE FRESH AIR FIEND

Confidence a Powerful Factor in Health

By ORISON SWETT MARDEN.

"What fine winter we are having," says the healthy man. "Very bad, very bad!" replies the chronic invalid. "This is the weather that brings pneumonia and other diseases. I feel now as if I were about to be laid up with something. Think I'll stop to see Doctor Blank on my way up town."

The sun was shining and the day was clear and cold, yet this man—the doctor's friend—saw only disease in the crisp air and bright skies.

How many people, like him, are always seeing sickness ahead and preparing for it! They expect it, anticipate it, and consequently have it. It is only a block or two to a physician; a drug store is on every corner, and the temptation to send for the physician or to get drugs at the slightest symptom of illness tends to make them more and more dependent on outside helps and less able to control their physical disorders.

One of the most unfortunate things that has come to us through what we call "higher civilization" is the killing of faith in our power of disease resistance. During the frontier days there were little villages and hamlets which physicians rarely entered, and here the people were strong and healthy and independent. They developed great powers of disease resistance.

There is no doubt that the doctor habit in many families has a great deal to do with the developing of unfortunate physical conditions in the child. Many mothers are always calling the doctor whenever there is the least sign of disturbance in the children. The result is that the child grows up with this disease picture, doctor picture, medicine picture in its mind, and it influences its whole life.

The time will come when a child and any kind of medicine will be considered a very incongruous combination. Were children properly reared in the love thought, in the truth thought, in the harmony thought; were they trained to right thinking, a doctor or medicine would be rarely needed.

One of the tendencies of ill health is to make one morbid. People who are constantly thinking about their ailments often develop a morbid passion for sympathy. They want to tell everybody of their aches and pains, to describe their symptoms.

Have you ever known a woman who has acquired the doctor habit, a woman who loves nothing in the world quite as well as an opportunity to tell the doctor of her ailments? She has poured them out to unwelcome ears, to forced listeners, till she longs for some one who can really appreciate it all, who sympathizes with her in her troubles, so she sends for the doctor or goes to see him.

This becomes almost a mania with some women who have few outside activities to divert them. Their minds naturally revert to themselves, and they become saturated with the poisoned thought.

Confidence is a powerful factor in health. We should thoroughly believe in our ability to keep ourselves well by healthful, harmonious, happy thinking. So long as we doubt our ability to maintain health, so long as we picture to ourselves disease and physical weakness, it is impossible to attain to a strong, normal physical condition.

The time will come when we will no more allow discordant thoughts in our mind than we would scatter thistle seeds over our gardens. Knowing well that thinking is building, our thinking will be reflected in our bodies.

Don't Endanger it With Calomel.

It is generally agreed by experts in this country and Europe that calomel has a very violent effect on the system. This accounts for the familiar disagreeable feeling accompanying a dose, and the weakened condition following it.

LIV-VER-LAX is a harmless vegetable compound, that is a mild but effective substitute for calomel. It has all the effectiveness, but not the effect, of calomel. Its splendid value has brought it into such wide use that in some states it has almost entirely replaced calomel.

Just try LIV-VER-LAX once, and you'll never use calomel again. Insist on the genuine, bearing the likeness and signature of L. K. Grigsby, which is guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded. For sale by Kinchele's Pharmacy.

Privileges of Manx Women.

Manx women, too, have special privileges, says the London Chronicle. Every female adult, widow or spinster, in the Isle of Man, whether she be owner, occupier, or lodger, has a vote for the house of keys elections. Every widow enjoys half of her husband's personal estate, and has a life interest in his real estate, and she cannot be deprived of this by will; whilst her written consent must be obtained to all transfers and deeds affecting her husband's property. On the other hand, no married woman can legally own in her own right either money or property in the Isle of Man; have no separate estate unless specially protected before marriage, and can make no will without the leave of her husband.

WHITE NOCTURNE SATIN.

Evening dress of white nocturne satin, with a bouffant drapery about the hips, from which falls a tunic of cream lace. Roses in the back. Lace corsage matches the tunic.

FLAT HAT FAVORITE.

If the world continues to wear the flat black velvet hat with its trimming of white velvet flowers there will not be much ingenuity required in the millinery industry; at least, not for the present.

Rarely has a shape been advanced that has met with such general approval. It has ousted the high, irregular turban, although one sees a few narrow, boat shaped, high turbans in velvet. These have little or no trimming. In truth, few of the hats are dependent upon garniture. Everything is in the shape and the quality of the velvet or satin used.

There are no felt hats and no soft hats except the waterproof one of black or colored oilskin.

WHEN LINCOLN WAS UNDER FIRE

The upper picture is a wartime photograph of Lincoln taken on one of his visits to the front; on the left is Allan Pinkerton. The lower picture, copyright by the Patriot Publishing company, shows Fort Stevens, where Lincoln was under fire.

ALTHOUGH Abraham Lincoln enlisted as a soldier for service in the Black Hawk war, that Indian disturbance ended before he saw active service. But in the that year of the civil war, when he was president of the United States and ex officio commander in chief of the armies of the north, he once witnessed actual fighting between Union soldiers and Confederates and approached so close to the scene that he was under fire himself. Three feet from his side a Union officer was shot before he heeded the remonstrances of his subordinate officers and stepped out of danger.

The scene was Fort Stevens, one of the defenses of the city of Washington when General Jubal A. Early made his raid almost to the outskirts of the city. The date was July 12, 1861. Early's approach to the capital city of the north had aroused great apprehension among the officials, and members of the cabinet, senators and representatives and other officials with ladies went out to see the northern soldiers resist Early's approach.

"Rarely did a minor engagement present so clear an opportunity for viewing his progress, and rarely for such a scene was a more memorable group of spectators assembled," says Pond's "The Shenandoah Valley in 1861" in the chapter entitled "Early Menaces Washington." "On the parapet of Fort Stevens stood the tall form of Abraham Lincoln by the side of General Wright, who in vain warned the eager president that his position was swept by the bullets of sharpshooters mill an officer was shot down within three feet of him, when he reluctantly stepped below. Sheltered from the line of fire cabinet officers and a group of citizens and ladies, breathless with excitement, watched the fortunes of the fight.

"It was no mock battle that these spectators witnessed. Stretchers soon came from the field by scores with their ghastly loads, the hospitals in the rear of the fort were astir, and here and there, dotting the meadow, the orchard and the dusty highway, lay many a lad for whom the wild cheers of the crowd fell on deaf ears. Colonel Visscher was dead, Lieutenant Colonel Johnson mortally wounded, Major Jones dead, Major Crosby with his left arm gone—in brief, every regimental commander of the Third brigade killed or wounded, with a loss of 250 in the brigade and a total loss of 280 out of the force engaged. A monument on the slope fronting Fort Stevens preserves the memory of the Union dead."

Only House Lincoln Ever Owned

THE two story frame house where Lincoln lived in Springfield, Ill., is now looked upon with as much reverence as Washington's home at Mount Vernon, on the Potomac. It is the only house which Abraham Lincoln ever owned.

The house was built in 1840 and was bought by Mr. Lincoln in 1844, two years after his marriage. He added an extra story to it and furnished it simply. Here he lived for seventeen years, and when he left it he went to the White House.

He crossed the threshold of his SIDE VIEW OF LINCOLN HOUSE IN SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Springfield home for the last time on Feb. 11, 1861. The house is now a museum of Lincoln relics.

About fourteen years ago the Illinois legislature made an appropriation of several thousand dollars for restoring and renovating the house. Everything was arranged as it was when Mrs. Lincoln kept house there.

The Lincoln home is visited every year by 50,000 to 100,000 people, who pass with reverent steps from room to room examining the plain furniture, the books and personal belongings that have gained a priceless value from their association with the memory of the martyr president.

Not far away from the martyr president's former home are his last resting place and monument.

Lincoln Walks At Midnight.

[Written at Springfield, Ill., at the beginning of the great European war.] It is portentous and a thing of state. That here at midnight, in our little town, A mourning figure walks and will not rest. Near the old courthouse, pacing up and down.

Or by his homestead or the shadowed yards He lingers where his children used to play. Or through the market on the well worn stones He stalks until the dawn stars burn away.

A bronzed, lank man! His suit of ancient black. A famous high top hat and plain worn shawl. Make him the quaint great figure that men love— The prairie lawyer, master of us all.

He cannot sleep upon his hillside now: He is among us, as in time before. And we who toss and lie awake for long Breathe deep and start to see him pass the door.

His head is bowed. He thinks on men and kings. Yea, when the sick world cries, how can he sleep? Too many peasants fight, they know not why! Too many homesteads in black terror weep.

The sins of all the war lords burn his heart. He sees the Drendoughts scouring every main. He carries on his shawl wrapt shoulders now The bitterness, the folly and the pain.

He cannot rest until a spirit dawn Shall come—the thinking hope of Europe free; The league of sober folk, the workers' earth, Bringing long peace to Cornland, Alp and sea.

It breaks his heart that kings must murder still. That all his hours of travail here for men Seem yet in vain. And who will bring white peace? That he may sleep upon his hill again? —Vachel Lindsay in Independent.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN ON INTERNATIONAL PEACE.

In the spring of 1862 successes by the Union forces engaged in combating the southern efforts to divide the Union led President Lincoln to issue the following proclamation:

"It has pleased Almighty God to vouchsafe signal victories to the land and naval forces engaged in suppressing an internal rebellion and at the same time to avert from our country the dangers of foreign intervention and invasion.

"It is therefore recommended to the people of the United States that at their next weekly assemblages in their accustomed places of public worship which shall occur after notice of this proclamation shall have been received they especially acknowledge and render thanks to our Heavenly Father for these inestimable blessings, that they then and there implore spiritual consolation in behalf of all who have been brought into affliction by the casualties and calamities of sedition and civil war and that they reverently invoke the divine guidance for our national counsels, to the end that they may speedily result in the restoration of peace, harmony and unity throughout our borders AND HASTEN THE ESTABLISHMENT OF FRATERNAL RELATIONS AMONG ALL THE COUNTRIES OF THE EARTH."

A Lincoln Story With a Point.

During the civil war some gentlemen from the west obtained an interview with President Lincoln at a time when things looked dark for the national cause and voiced their fears.

The president said to them: "Suppose, gentlemen, all the property that you were worth was in gold and you had put it in the hands of Blondin to carry across the Niagara river on a rope, would you shake the cable and keep shouting to him, 'Blondin, stand up a little straighter—go a little faster—lean a little more to the north or to the south?' No; you would hold your breath, as well as your tongue, and keep your hands off until he was over."
